Chen Chen Huang '23 is an Economics and Music double major from Lexington, MA. Originally from Shanghai, China, Chen Chen began her musical journey at a young age with the piano. She discovered her passion for the flute in third grade and has been studying the instrument ever since, now under the tutelage of Jacqueline DeVoe. Chen Chen is an active member of the Williams music community, regularly performing with the Berkshire Symphony and a woodwind quintet composed of talented peers. She has also performed at various college events, including studio recitals, Midweek Music, and Convocation, where she has played a diverse repertoire spanning works by Dutilleux, Doppler, and Nielsen. The past semester, Chen Chen won as one of the soloists of the Williams College Concerto Competition and had the honor to perform with the Berkshire Symphony in April. In this senior recital, she celebrates her growth and the many who have helped her along her musical journey. After graduation, she will pursue a career in the consulting industry in New York City while continuing her passion for music.
