Tiffany Yu '12, biography

Tiffany Yu, student of Doris Stevenson, is a senior at Williams College majoring in Art History and Sociology. She has been studying the piano for eighteen years. Born in San Jose, California, she attended the San Francisco Conservatory of Music Preparatory Division for five years before becoming a student of renowned pianist Hans Boepple at the age of eleven. Tiffany has received awards from the Music Teachers Association of California, the Annual San Francisco Chopin Competition for Young Pianists and was a winner of the Young Pianists' Beethoven Competition and a semifinalist at the Oberlin International Piano Competition in 2007. Tiffany has also participated in numerous master classes, including ones with John Perry, Randall Hodgkinson, Adam Neiman, Seymour Lipkin, and Simone Dinnerstein. In addition to studying the piano, Tiffany also plays the cello and was a member of the San Francisco Symphony Youth Orchestra.
