Laone Thekiso started learning to play the piano in school at the age of seven while his family was living in Sweden. After the family returned to Botswana in 1999, Laone underwent a two-year period without a piano teacher. In high school, he began taking lessons with Olga Merker, a pianist from the former Yugoslavia. With her Laone began playing classical music. Over the six years under her tutelage, he performed three piano concerti with the Johannesburg Festival Orchestra from South Africa. At Williams, Laone studies with Artist-in-Residence, Doris Stevenson. He plans to major in music and to pursue a career in performance. He is also interested in composition and ethnomusicology, and aims to gain more knowledge and proficiency in these fields. Laone began to play the Zimbabwean Marimba at the end of primary school and continued throughout high school. He joined the Zambezi Marimba Band in his first year at Williams and has been a member since.
